

What if you were paid for the value of your work?

You are a highly skilled software engineer. You can write code better and faster than most of your peers. However, in today's freelance agreements, you are still being paid by the hour. What would a future look like where you were rewarded for the outcomes of your work instead of the hours you spend?

"I just want to know if I'm going to be financially good."

FREEDOM
+ FLEXIBILITY > FULL TIME

"I want to do what I want to do, and not worry about anything else."

"I would take a smaller payout in the beginning if I had financially met my needs. To rely on longer term, potential payout, I would need to be very interested in the project."
